EXPERTS in ethnology recognize these degrees of negro blood. A half-negro is mulatto; a half-mulatto is a quadroon; a half-quadroon is a metis, and successive steps come meamleou, demi-meamleou, sang-mele, griffe, marabou, and sacatra. Probably for all practical purposes the child of a quadroon ceases to be a negro in appearance.

SWITZERLAND has notified the United States Government that she will transport live bees through her mails. The announcement of the fact from Mr. Brooks, Superintendent of Foreign Mails, is in the following language: "The International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union at Bern, Switzerland, has officially informed this Department that the Postal Administration of that Republic gives circulation in its mail to live bees." The Government appreciates this evidence of the friendly feeling of a sister Republic, and under the policy of reciprocity will probably do something for Switzerland in the way of chamolus skins or cuckoo clocks. Meanwhile Mr. Wankmaker is expected to issue a bulletin directing that any person having a live bee he desires to send to Switzerland shall tie a tag bearing the address to one of the bee's hind legs, stick a stamp on his back and drop him in a letter box.

PROFESSOR J. M. LAFIN, who has been called the champion athlete of the world, has given an expert opinion on cigarettes. He says: "I regard the habit of cigarette smoking as the curse of our young men. Its practice has filled our insane asylums, demoralized our institutions of learning and generally weakened the physical caliber of our youth more than all the other open vices put together. The death rate since the introduction of the cigarette is greater than ever was known before, and I exaggerate but a trifle in declaring that if the celebrated tobacco trust were to furnish coffins for all the dead who have or will succumb to the infamous habit it would bankrupt the whole concern. While we are sending Missionaries to Africa we are neglecting our young men at home. Many of them have acquired a habit that has become a social evil as distinct in its character as that of drunkenness. They depend upon their cigarette for a stimulant and resort to it with even more regularity than the drunkard takes his cocktail. Look upon the streets and you find it in the mouths of boys eight and ten years of age. Look in your colleges and you see a large proportion of the students wearing eyeglasses—a thing unknown two or three generations ago."

THE home of William Cullen Bryant, at Great Barrington, in which he was married and wrote some of his poems, is to be preserved. Caleb Ticknor owns the place, and has built a hotel on the site, but he carefully shifted the old cottage to the rear of the new building instead of destroying it.

A HORSE can live twenty-five days without solid food, merely drinking water, seventeen days without eating or drinking, and only five days when eating solid food without drinking. An idea prevails among horsemen that a horse should never be watered oftener than three times a day, or in twenty-four hours.

CLARENCE SMITH, aged 19, went to his home at Lockland, O., with $3, the proceeds of his week's work. His father, an old bum, demanded it at the point of a gun. The son got another gun and emptied its contents in the old rooster's chin. Unfortunately his injuries are not serious, for he has often threatened to kill his family.

A DISTINGUISHED dentist of New York city says that he boiled down a pound of young hyson tea from a quart to half a pint, and ten drops killed a rabbit three months old; and when boiled down to one gill eight drops killed a cat in a few minutes. Most persons who drink tea do not use less than a pound in three months, and yet a pound of hyson tea contains the poison enough to kill, according to the above experiment, more than 17,000 rabbits, or nearly 200 a day.

THE proprietor of the Howell Wheel Works, one of the largest manufacturing industries of that city, are at present considering the advisability of removing their plant from Covington. One of their main reasons for negotiating with outside cities is the annoyance the company is subjected to at each term of court, by complaints and indictments because there is an odor emanating from the oil they burn as fuel instead of coal.

Mrs. MICHAEL CLEMENS, aged 32 years, was found dead in the woods near Pleasantville, Pa. When found she was on her hands and knees, and her dress was on fire. There were two bullet holes in her neck and cuts on her head. She had been out in the woods gathering huckleberries, and had been gone some time when search was made for her. Near the body a man's hat and piece of suspender were found. It is supposed she was outraged and then murdered.

PHILIP COURTNEY, called "Peg-leg," "The Sailor" and other pet names, is in the city again. He was arrested several weeks ago for making a disturbance in the lower end of town, and a rough looking dirk was found on him. Mayor Pearce let him go on his promise to leave the city and return no more. He made his appearance Sunday night and was rearrested. Yesterday he was informed by the Mayor that he owed the city $25 and costs.

THIS will not be a good fruit year. Reports from 5,000 different points throughout the country give an average of about half a crop of apples and a light peach crop. The orchards of this region were full of bloom in the spring, but for some reason the fruit dropped off, and the foliage of the apple trees especially has a dilapidated appearance. The fruit outlook in Europe also is unfavorable. The usual crop is expected in California. There the growers have not only a choice climate, but the advantage of irrigation.

If the Carnegie Company should finally conclude to go down to Alabama, where they can get the raw material for about $5 a ton cheaper than it now costs them, about 30,000 Pennsylvanians would be out of employment. It is said that the wages of these men will average a little more than $3 a day, or an aggregate of $90,000,000 per annum. This sum would be at once drawn out of circulation in the Keystone State. Pennsylvania is not likely to permit the withdrawal of so much of its money from the State as to leave it so nearly empty. Those at Maysville are especially attracted.

BOMB SHELLS.

A Dangerous Collection of War Time Relics.

H. L. Sanders and James Force Killed While Extracting Powder

From Bomb Shells, Which Explode—The Explosion Sets Off Other Shells, Causing a Roar Like That of an Engagement—Strange and Sad Accident.

FRANKFORT, Ky., July 19.—A horrible catastrophe occurred about two miles and a half from this city, near the turnpike road to Louisville. The state had sold a large quantity of shot and loaded shells, which accumulated at the arsenal in war times, to a Louisville junk shop as old iron. The Louisville firm engaged H. L. Sanders and James Force to unload the shells, agreeing to give them the powder and some pay besides. The men hauled the ammunition to a point near Force's house, and commenced work under a fly.

Monday about half past 11 o'clock, while the men were alone at work in the improvised tent, a tremendous explosion was heard. A laborer at work in a field nearby rushed to the tent and found both men torn limb from limb and their bodies perforated and mangled with small shot and slugs from the exploded shell. The tent had caught fire and fallen in upon the unfortunate victims and ignited the fuse to a number of other shells. The laborer dragged the dismembered bodies from the dunes and beat a hasty retreat. He was none too soon. In three minutes the fire had communicated with a stack of shells, and off they went with the thunder of a full battery of forty-pounders. This was followed at short intervals by the explosion of single shells that were lying about.

It all sounded like the cannonade of armies in battle, and shook the capitol over the hills—that encircle it. Force's house, a short distance from the explosion, was entirely dismantled, pieces of shell and slugs tearing through it in every direction. A farm house a mile distant had every window glass shattered, and its occupants badly frightened. A shell was picked up on the turnpike a quarter of a mile from the explosion. Sanders and Force had extracted a thousand pounds of powder from the shells already, which they had sold to the adjutant general's department.

Sanders and Force were both well known young men here. The former was married. Force had charge of the arsenal for a number of years. Fully five hundred people visited the scene of the fearful bombshell explosion Monday afternoon, where Sanders and Force met their tragic fate. Five or six hundred feet of rail fence was swept entirely away, the rails being broken into bits and carried a quarter of a mile. A cornfield was wholly destroyed, cut as smooth as though a bladed cyclone had sheared it. One of the descending bombs struck the top of Force's house, penetrated the roof, ceiling and floor, burying itself in the cellar. The whole face of the earth for hundreds of yards around the fatal spot is covered with fragments of shells. A shell exploded after the arrival of the coroner, two hours after the explosion that killed the men.

Fortunately the wind carried the flames in an opposite direction from where sixteen hundred pounds of powder and shells are stored. Citizens finally plucked up courage to fight the fire, and got it under control late Monday afternoon. Sanders and Force were so frightfully mangled and powder burned that they could only be identified by pieces of clothing clinging to the dismembered bodies. The disaster has driven the Force family almost mad.

Wire Works Close.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 19.—The Homestead steel works strike has indirectly caused the indefinite suspension of the Braddock wire works plant at Rankon Station, and some six hundred men are out of work. The mills, nail, rod, bar wire and wire drawing departments have all closed down owing to a lack of steel billets to make wire rods, and in time rails
